'Once and Again' takes an honest look at life

By Candace Havens

TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

It's late in the evening, and Lily Manning (Sela Ward) stands at the bathroom sink washing away the remains of a difficult day. She raises her head and sees her daughter Grace (Julia Whelan) in the mirror. Grace feels the need to make a confession to her mother about her part in the day's events.

The words tumble out, and the teen tells her mother that she knew what was going on but didn't want to cause trouble by telling anyone. Lily, who feels equally guilty, begins rubbing lotion into Grace's hands and offers some soothing words. As the conversation comes to a close, Grace turns to walk out the door. She stops and turns back to her mother.

Grace: One more thing.

Lily: What's that?

Grace: You're a good sister, Mom. I just think you should know that. Before you go to sleep.

The poignant scene is from the insightful and critically acclaimed drama "Once and Again," which airs Wednesdays on ABC. It is an intimate moment between a daughter and her mother that on any given night could have been played out in millions of homes across America. It's honest, heart-wrenching and realistic.

Sitcoms muzzling laugh tracks

By John Crook

There's a very simple reason "The Job" looks and sounds different from virtually any other sitcom on television.

"I'm bored, especially with half-hour comedies," says Peter Tolan, the Emmy- and Peabody Award-winning alumnus of "The Larry Sanders Show" and "Murphy Brown," who co-created this rudely funny and very adult new ABC situation comedy with its star, Denis Leary. The series premieres Wednesday, March 14.

"The half-hour format is just very tired right now, and it either needs a rest or the whole format has to be shaken up," Tolan continues. "I know the 'language' of these shows too well to watch most of them. Setup, punchline, I can pretty much see what's always coming. That's why Denis and I told ABC we just weren't interested in doing a show like that."

Like a growing number of TV comedies, "The Job" — which follows a bad-boy New York cop (Leary) on his daily routine — is being filmed without a laugh track, trusting its viewers to know when something is funny.

And it's easy to see why sitcom producers are taking this once-revolutionary notion more seriously. The networks didn't field a single new hit this season among their sitcoms with laugh tracks. The season's lone comedy success? "Ed," NBC's laugh-track-free comedy series driven by its characters, not its jokes.

Last season's only breakout comedy hit? "Malcolm in the Middle," a Fox half-hour without a laugh track.

Talented Gossett fights racism

By Jacqueline Cutler

TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

Louis Gossett Jr., the towering actor who played the belligerent sergeant in "An Officer and a Gentleman," is a ... violet!

Most people probably would not want to say this to his face. After all, he's played some tough characters. But the Brooklyn-bred actor just laughs. Being a violet got him through New York University on a basketball scholarship, playing for its team, the Violets.

He was good enough for the Knicks to draft him, but he passed. "I had bad knees and broken toes and they did not have the money they do today," he says from his home in Malibu, Calif. Occasionally he'll try pickup games, "but Magic forgets that I'm 63 and he's whatever, a baby."

Gossett keeps himself lean by swimming in his indoor pool and working out in his gym. And he keeps busy by producing movies through his company, Logo (for Louis Gossett), and acting. He has been in eight TV movies in the past two years. On Sunday, March 18, he stars in "For Love of Olivia" on CBS.

This movie is a sequel to "To Dance With Olivia." Gossett plays a noble small-town lawyer running for Congress against the slimy incumbent (Robert Urich). Set in the South during the 1960s, the movie is designed to send a message about racism.

Actor-comic Steve Martin hosts ABC's telecast of the 73rd Academy Awards ceremony, airing from the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles at 7:30 p.m. Sunday on ABC

Oscar speaks with accent

By John Crook
TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

There are very few things viewers can count on with this year's Oscar race.

Among them: Steve Martin will host ABC's telecast of the 73rd annual Academy Awards ceremonies from the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles on Sunday, March 25; Italian producer Dino De Laurentiis ("Hannibal") will receive the prestigious Irving G. Thalberg award; and at some point during the evening, returning choreographer Debbie Allen will contribute a moment that is jaw-dropping in its silliness, tackiness and/or outright vulgarity.

Beyond that, this year's race for the Academy golden boy is pretty much wide open, with most Oscar pundits shrugging their shoulders at the most likely candidates to win.

Some races are closer than others, however, with current sentiment favoring a lavish period piece that was the year's biggest surprise hit.

"Almost without a doubt the best picture award will go to 'Gladiator,' says Turner Classic Movies host Robert Osborne, whose "70 Years of the Oscar: The Official History of the Academy Awards" is an invaluable chronicle of Academy history.

"It might have been more of a race if 'Billy Elliot,' say, had gotten the best picture nomination that went to 'Chocolat.' I'm not sure I follow the logic in the Academy saying that Stephen Daldry was one of the year's five best directors, yet the film he directed was not nominated."
